CancerQuest currently collaborates with institutions around the world to present cancer information in six languages. We are always looking to form mutually beneficial relationships with interested organizations.

Some projects for which we are seeking partners:

- Translation: Currently, the translations of CancerQuest into Russian, Mandarin and Italian are being performed by our partners in Russia, Taiwan and Italy, respectively. We are always looking for additional partners that would allow us to keep the non-English versions of the site up-to-date.
- Outreach: We are looking to build a network of educator who are trained to use the material on CancerQuest to patients. Emory University medical students successfully performed this task for several years.
- Drug Discovery and Development: We are looking to tell the story of how drugs are discovered and brought to market. We envision creating several interactive modules to allow users to 'design' drugs and learn about drug resistance.

If you have an idea about a cancer-related project, we're ready to hear about it. Contact us.
