So, e-cigarettes are supposed to help people quit smoking, right?
The opposite may be true.

A study of 915 U.S. adults compared people who used e-cigarettes with those that didn't. E-cigarette users were much more likely to start smoking tobacco within 18 months. For those who did not vape, 10.2% began using cigarettes within the next 18 months. For those using e-cigarettes, almost half (47%) had begun smoking within 18 months.

The reasons are still under investigation, but the use of sweet 'introductory' tobacco products may be a factor.
